

Nehru ignored intel on Chinese road in Indian territory in 1957: Book

Rajeev.Deshpande
@timesgroup.com

New Delhi: In early 1957, an audacious secret mission in to Aksai Chin that saw an Indian Army officer and a havidlar join a group of yak grazers in disguise actually provided first-hand evidence that China had illegally built a road in territory claimed by India.

Unfortunately, the efforts of Lt Col R S Basera of Kumar Regiment and Havildar Diwan Singh of the Corps of Engineers went abegging despite the immense risks and hardships they undertook as then defence minister V K Krishna Menon and then PM Jawaharlal Nehru remained sceptical about the road's exact location. It would be a full two year later before the Indian government admitted in Parliament that the road had indeed been built.

In a soon to be out book, 'End of an Era, India Exits Tibet', well-known China expert Claude Arpi has set out in exhaustive detail, based on Nehru Memorial Library papers, de-classified Indian and Chinese documents and personal interviews, how even voluminous reports by its own agencies about the ominous consolidation of China's occupation of Tibet failed to prod India into action.

The theme of the book is about India losing all its influence in Tibet, helping China press aggressive claims along the border with India. This came at the cost of letting down opinion in Tibet that looked up to "Chogyal Nehru" and felt India could come to their aid in preventing "Sinoification" of their culture and ways.

On a visit to Chumbi Valley in Tibet in September 1958, Nehru was mobbed in the bazaar by locals and Indian traders, despite a Chinese guard. Later, at his place of stay at Yatang, Nehru seemed to indicate his helplessness. "Everybody tells me to get tough in Tibet, what am I going to get by being tough," he said, going on to point to India's internal problems of poverty and famine.

Delhi riots: 5 denied bail for murder

New Delhi: A Delhi court has dismissed a bail plea of five rioters accused of killing a 48-year-old property dealer, Parvez, who was involved in pacifying the situation between the two communities during the northeast Delhi riots.

Additional sessions Judge Amitabh Rawat noted that, apart from the victim's son, Sahil, police/prosecution has produced evidence of three protected witnesses, whose statements were recorded in a sealed cover. These witnesses identified the five accused involved in the killing and rioting that followed. TNN

Kerala village 'castes out' bias from barbershop

Idukki: Bhagyaraj has begun a momentous job in a modest barbershop owned and funded by the panchayat of Vattavada in Idukki. He was invited to work in a special salon that opened Sunday in a bid to eliminate caste discrimination in the region. The local body had decided to open a shop and appoint a barber after those that functioned in the locality had refused to offer their service to the members of the Chakliya community. Licenses of two shops in the Koviloor region that had discriminated against members of the scheduled caste community have been cancelled. Thus Bhagyaraj, a resident of Koviloor, who had a barbershop at Kanthalloor near Marayoor, returned to his hometown at the behest of the panchayat to operate the first 'common barbershop' in Vattavada. Time for management students to reskill

Academic Jitendra K Das lists the career choices that are likely to trend in the post-COVID-19 world

Covid-19 has exposed emerging areas of opportunity in the tech and management spaces. Executives from leading tech vendors will now have to re-skill to stay relevant. As the world is going digital, here are some career choices that are most likely to trend :

Cloud Computing
Since everybody has been working remotely in the past few months, more companies are transitioning to the cloud and employing secure cloud storage. This has increased the demand for cloud architects.

Data science
The consumption and utilisation of data have led to a spike in extracting, processing and analysing data into information that can be duly optimised. Consequently, the demand for data science experts has risen exponentially in the last few years.

Artificial Intelligence
There has emerged a growing demand to understand how a machine learns, receives data information from its environment, and decides its response without human intervention. Hence, there is a need for people with skills to develop, assess and implement AI-enabled applications and strategies into business processes.

Healthcare
Due to the pandemic, another new career is opening, it is healthcare management. This job role will fill the shortage of doctors to some extent, wherever the standard processes are in place.

Risk Management
Risk management plays a vital role amidst such a crisis. This will be one of the most in-demand skills in post-Covid workplaces.

Business Analytics
Post the pandemic, most businesses will need competent data modelling professionals to make profitable, efficacious, and data-driven business decisions.

Big Data Analytics
Post COVID-19, there will be demand for professionals who are skilled at handling huge volumes of data efficiently and help businesses make intelligent data-driven decisions.

UPES keeps its employability commitment despite COVID-19 with 94% placements

After months of subdued operations because of the COVID-19, India Inc. is trying to bounce back on its feet and is demanding professionals with cross-domain knowledge, negligible to no warm-up or training period and collaborative not competitive mindset.

I am proud of the resilience and adaptability demonstrated by the expertise in their core and allied fields.

students, some of the qualities that organizations seek in their employees, both young and old, besides the domain knowledge."

Key to The Covid-19 Conundrum: Multipronged Placement Drive

COVID-19 struck at a time when the placement drive at UPES was at its peak. However, a multipronged strategy based on the thorough assessment of the situation and analysis of the recruiters' sentiments helped students in navigating the unforeseen circumstances. More than 2400 internships, mostly virtual, were arranged for the students to get real-time experience and put their knowledge and skills to use. Specific training interventions targeting cross-functional expertise were planned to enhance their employability quotient. The university also provided them access to online learning platforms like Coursera and encouraged them to pursue certification courses to gain additional

Bridging the Demand-supply Gap

With India Inc. under tremendous pressure, organizations are relying on campus placements to hire the right candidate for the right job, besides their other recruitment sources. The EDGE (Enhanced Development for Growth and Enrichment) initiative by UPES supports students in their chosen fields with a focus on key action areas- entrepreneurship, exam pathways (such as Services Selection Board for Indian Armed Forces), and employability. Through EDGE the career services wing of UPES customizes training and mentorship programs to address individual requirements of each student, depending on whether they want to run a start-up, sit for entrance exams, explore social work or start a corporate career.

About UPES:

Established in 2003 through the UPES Act, 2003 of the State Legislature of Uttarakhand, UPES is a UGC-recognized university. In 2020, UPES received 5-Stars for employability (placements), academic development, program strength and facilities by globally acclaimed QS Rating. UPES offers industry-aligned and specialized graduate and post-graduate programs through its seven schools: School of Engineering, School of Computer Science, School of Design, School of Law, School of Business, School of Health Sciences, and School of Modern Media. Given its industry-oriented programs and emphasis on holistic development, UPES graduates are a preferred choice for recruiters, ensuring a track record of 90%+ placements over the last few years. UPES is driven by its core philosophy and purpose of delivering outstanding student outcomes.
